BE A GOOD ANCESTOR
THE MICHELA MARTELLO COLORING BOOK
is an Italian-born illustrator-turned-artist who lives and works in Brooklyn producing murals and artworks on textiles. A perpetually curious and interdisciplinary artist, Martello brings together traditional and contemporary influences, incorporating a variety of techniques, mediums, themes, and cultural references to create art that bridges time and dissolves borders. Her artwork is humanistic, accessible, and consistently characterized by her use of symbolism.

Martello’s approach is an open exploration of history, belief systems, and their corresponding symbols, and is driven by the discovery and rediscovery of meanings. She experiments with new and archival materials as she works, interweaving medium and technique to capture and convey the intangible spark of different religions, races, cultures, and time periods. She builds up her textile canvases only to break them down and retreat. It is through these surfaces—rendered equally by construction and destruction—that the materials, cultures, and time periods she explores are united. In one poignant example, she uses dismantled vintage army sackcloth as the backdrop for hope-inspired themes.
In her 2017 solo exhibition at Pen + Brush, Future Is Goddess, Martello created a site-specific interactive graffiti mural, Graffiti Goddesses, featuring three 15-foot-tall goddesses representing a mixture of cultures and backgrounds. Visitors were invited to contribute to the mural by adding their own marks, tags, drawings, and words around and on top of the work. Over the months the mural was on display, we witnessed the public engaging with the work in extremely uplifting and meaningful ways: a unifying response to the political anxieties and social uncertainties of the time. Contributors added their own drawings, and text including “Be A Good Ancestor,” “Black Lives Matter,” “The Future Is Female,” and “todos tenets talent para sentir”; even a marriage proposal was written, delivered—and accepted!—in front of the mural.

It is in this spirit—through Martello’s unique ability to take the heaviest substance of life and translate it into something beautiful, accessible, and interactive—that this coloring book was born. We hope you find similar empowerment through this coloring book, and use it to experience the unifying power of art.
